

Dr. Chuck's Web Log

March 15, 2007

On the Eve of Sakai 2.4 Code Freeze...

Today is the nominal day for code freeze for Sakai 2.4 - of course Sakai 2.4 is the major release for Sakai for 2007. For me I have been a bit more technical the last few months in my push to get JSR-168 and many other portal features into Sakai.

Code freeze is good because it focuses one - but I have been letting my non-technical duties slip a bit the last six weeks. Particularly my inbox which has ballooned to 920 unprocessed messages. Aargh. But the fact that the portal is in good shape thanks to Ian Boston and David Dewolf - I can get back to answering all the mail and putting "sorry it took so long to respond" in front of each message..

I think it will be worth it - 2.4 will be with us for a long time as with all of the other Sakai June releases - so we might as well make it as awesome as possible.

:)

Posted by csev at March 15, 2007 10:02 AM