

Centre for Recording Achievement

ARCHIVES

“For the past 15 years, there has been increasing use of a range of ways of encouraging individual learners to identify, articulate and evidence their learning and experience to add to and enrich examination qualifications.

“A key benefit is for learners to reflect on this and to plan the next step in learning or employment on the basis of clearer information.

“The Centre and this website seeks to inform staff involved in developing these processes in schools, colleges, universities, companies and professional bodies about examples of good practice, staff development materials, and information on lifelong learning perspectives.”

From www.recordingachievement.org/about_us/Default.asp, 26 July 2005