

THE NEW YORKER

OCTOBER 13, 2008

AUDIO

BETTER LATE

OCTOBER 20, 2008

This week in the magazine, Malcolm Gladwell asks why we equate genius with precocity. Here Gladwell talks about how artistic prodigies differ from late bloomers and the kinds of support over decades that some artists need to realize their gifts.