

U.S. Department of Education

Superceded

The U.S. Department of Education "establishes policy for, administers, and coordinates most federal assistance to education. ED provides an overview of the condition of education in the United States, exercises and conducts programs designed to achieve excellence in education, promotes educational opportunities for all citizens, and supplements state and local education efforts." The Department also "collects and publishes statistics on the nation's education system and sponsors research in education."

From www.ed.gov, 17 September 2007